Paquin Tower art class to display work at Art League

COLUMBIA, MO (June 14, 2005) -- Members of the senior/adaptive program at Paquin Tower have been invited to display their work at a Columbia Art League exhibit.

The program at Paquin is administered by the Columbia Parks and Recreation Department and is geared toward individuals more than 50 years of age or those with a mental or physical disability.

One of the programs offered at Paquin is an acrylic paint class. Class participants will be displaying their work in an exhibit entitled "American Images" at the Art League today (June 14) through July 16.

This is the first time class members have been invited to display their work at a gallery. Each April, the class holds their own art show at Paquin Tower, led by instructor Polly Dunavant.

Programs at Paquin Tower are organized for residents but are open to the community. For more information about Paquin programs, call 874-7473.
